GALSON ENERGY 2017 PRODUCTION

BUMPER YEAR

Last year turned out to be bumper period for wind energy with the highest level of average production so far. Whilst the winter months were generally in line with forecast, it was the spring and summer months that pushed figures up. As can be seen from the graph above, the highest achieving months compared to the forecast were April, June, July and November. April 'led the pack' as the windiest month for a large part of the year but was finally toppled by November and then nudged into third place by December.
